Offering all of the necessary amenities to a family while providing the security of a small town.

*G*roesbeck was dedicated as a township by the Houston and Texas Central Railroad in 1869 and was named for Abraham Groesbeck, one of its directors. Development of a city government began on April 11, 1871, when the town was incorporated by an act of the legislature. On April 12, 1871, a post office was established and the name was listed as Groesbeck. This spelling stuck.

Two businesses which were located in Groesbeck at this time were Sanger Brothers and Tom Padgitt and Company. These moved to Dallas and Waco respectively, and have remained in business to this day in some form. Almost immediately, the Methodist Church began to erect a church and a Union Sunday School was organized. The first newspaper was established in Groesbeck in 1871. The Groesbeck Masonic Lodge 354 was chartered on June 14, 1872. Groesbeck became the county seat of Limestone County on December 20, 1873. On May 24, 1890 an election was held to establish a school system and on June 30, 1890 the citizens overwhelmingly voted to incorporate the city and establish the mayor-council form of government, which survives to this day. Following a disastrous fire in 1896, the fire department was founded.

Located centrally in the area between Houston, Austin and the Dallas/Fort Worth

Metroplex, the Groesbeck area has built an economy long based on agriculture which has recently expanded to various mining enterprises and several small manufacturing industries. Because of its central location, Groesbeck offers all of the necessary amenities to a family while providing the security of a small town. In addition, the area offers many recreational facilities, such as Ft. Parker State Park and Lake Limestone, which provide relaxation for its citizens and tourists. Additionally, its rich history is preserved in many historical sites in the area. Old Ft. Parker was the site of the kidnapping of Cynthia Ann Parker, who later became the mother of Quanah Parker, the last Comanche chief. The Confederate Reunion Grounds provided the location for many county-wide activities and is preserved today. It is also the home of Limestone County's "Million Dollar Courthouse." The estimated population of Groesbeck in 2017 was 4318.

KOSSE, TEXAS is situated on State Highways 1-4 and 7 near the Falls County line in southwestern Limestone County. Settlers made homes by nearby Duck Creek in the mid-1840s and ran a stage stop for the Franklin-Springfield and Waco-Marlin stage routes. In 1869 Kosse became the end of the Houston and Texas Central Railway and was named for Theodore Kosse, a chief engineer for the railroad and the man who surveyed the road for the town.

Businesses moved to Kosse from Eutaw, two miles west, and the Eutaw post office was moved to Kosse in 1870. Development of a town government began in 1871. The community reached a population of 500 by 1880. Union, Methodist, Baptist, and Presbyterian churches were organized. The New Era, the first newspaper, was published before 1880. The Cyclone was begun in 1885 by James O. Jones. That year the town had several cotton gins, two sawmills, and three gristmills. John Dimelow, an Englishman, opened a ceramics lab in 1870. Kosse also had the first brickyard in the county

On October 1, 1884, an acre of land was granted for a public school. Around 1892-93 Kosse became an independent school district with J. Thomas Hall as superintendent. In 1893 one school in Kosse had 225 students and six teachers, and another school had eighty African-American students.

In 1914 Kosse had three businesses, two banks, and a population of 700. In 1921 the chamber of commerce was organized. By 1928 the population was 1,500, and by 1931 Kosse had fifty-eight businesses. After that the population and number of businesses slowly began to decline. The Kosse schools were consolidated with the Groesbeck Independent School District in 1968. In 1989 Kosse had eleven businesses and a population of 519. In 1990 the population was 505.

Situated in central Texas, Mexia is in a prime geographic location, centrally located between Dallas, Houston, and Austin. Residents have the very best of both worlds: the relaxed approach to the life of a smaller community setting, and all the attractions of a larger city at their fingertips. With an average annual temperature of 67 degrees, Mexia is truly a great place to live ... no matter how you say it!

Mexia is at the intersection of U.S. Highway 84 and State Highways 14 and 171, twelve miles northeast of Groesbeck in Limestone County. It was named for the Mexia family, who in 1833 received an eleven-league land grant that included what is now the town site. The town was laid out in 1870 by a trustee of the Houston and Texas Central Townsite Company, which offered lots for sale in 1871, as the Houston and Texas Central Railway were completed between Hearne and Groesbeck.

The Mexia post office began operation in 1872, and the community was incorporated with a mayoral form of government in 1873, by an act of the legislature. The city's first newspaper, the Ledger, was established in Fairfield in 1869 and moved to Mexia in 1872. By 1880 Mexia also had four schools, three churches, and a variety of businesses to serve its 1,800 residents; by 1885 the town had gas works, an opera house, two banks, two sawmills, and 2,000 residents. The Mexia Democrat was established in 1887 and the Weekly News in 1898. Between 1904 and 1906 the Trinity and Brazos Valley Railway built track between Hillsboro and Houston, making Mexia a commercial crossroads for area farmers.

In 1912 the Mexia Gas and Oil Company drilled ten dry holes, but in the eleventh attempt discovered a large natural gas deposit. The Mexia oilfield was discovered in 1920, and the population of Mexia increased from 3,482 to nearly 35,000. The rapid growth was too great for local authorities to handle, and for a short time in 1922 Mexia was under martial law. That year proved to be the peak production year for the Mexia field, with 35 million barrels produced. Cumulative production of the field totaled 108 million barrels by the mid-1980s. In 1924 Mexia residents passed a new city charter that changed the local government to a city manager system. After the initial oil boom, the population of Mexia declined to 10,000 by the mid-1920s. The prosperity generated by the boom, however, continued until the 1930s, when the Great Depression forced many people to leave in search of work. The number of residents in the town stabilized at 6,500 in the early 1930s, but the number of businesses reported fell from 280 to 190. In 1942 a camp for prisoners of war was established at Mexia; the facility was converted in 1947 for use as the Mexia State School, which became one of the community's principal employers. The population was reported as 6,618 in the early 1950s, 5,943 in the early 1970s, 7,172 in the late 1980s, and 6,933 in 1990.

TEAGUE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

A Great Place to enjoy a Lifetime

On Oct. 26, 1835, Green Berry Brewer was granted 4,429 acres of land by the Mexican State of Coahuila and Texas. This league of land was located in the southwestern part of what later became and is now Freestone County, Texas. Brewer paid the sum of $62.50 for the land to the Mexican government. This instrument conveying the title to Brewer instructed him to construct fixed and permanent land markers at every single angle of the tract within one year and that he must populate it and cultivate it and that he must never convey it in mortmain.

In time Brewer, or his heirs, disposed of the property, parcel by parcel, to those who farmed as a means of livelihood and a rural settlement developed on a portion of the land and this settlement was called "Brewer Prairie." This first post office was established on June 20, 1880, in the name of Brewer.

About 1905, the Trinity & Brazos Valley Railway (T&BV) decided to intersect a north to south main railroad line through Freestone County. B.F. Yoakum, a prominent railroad official, selected a site near the little village of Brewer. This charming township of less than 500 people occupied only 593 acres of land in the county. Soon after the railway's decision, Mr. Yoakum persuaded Brewer residents to honor his mother's maiden name; so, on April 20, 1906 Brewer officially became Teague.

Railway construction began in the early part of 1906 and prosperity quickly rolled into Teague. The town grew remarkably within a few months. Not only did the T&BV choose Teague for its train maintenance shops and roundhouse, but also as the main division point between Ft. Worth/Dallas and Houston. This destined Teague to become an important railroad center. On July 23, 1906, the now close to 1,000 Teague residents turned out to witness the first passenger train arrive in Teague.

On June 7, 1907, Teague elected W.R. (Bill) Boyd, Jr. to be its first mayor. Mr. Boyd established a sound city government, and his leadership moved the town forward. Within two years, developers built 50 brick business buildings in Teague's downtown area. Population increased to 4,500. The town's people formed a volunteer fire department. City officials commissioned a water works system, voters approved a school bond issue, and the public inaugurated a city park.

Around 1910, the railway company's financial problems began effecting Teague. Bankruptcy court rulings forced the company to cancel most of its rail services. As a result, many Teague people lost their jobs. After nearly 20 despairing years, the Trinity & Brazos Valley Railway sold out to the Burlington-Rock Island Railroad Co (B-RI). By this time, population was down to 3,500. The B-RI immediately increased rail service through Teague. In the early 1930s, passenger service expanded. Swift diesel powered units replaced locomotives and sleek stainless steel cars complimented these modern engines. The B-RI's Rocket and Zephyr linked Houston with Dallas, and Teague was the only stop between them.

World War II stimulated railroad business. Passenger trains relocated military troops, and freight trains transported critical material to northern industrial centers. During the 1940s, people boarding trains in Teague could travel from Houston to Minneapolis.

During the 1950s, rail passenger service started declining. Air travel was replacing train travel and people preferred using their cars. Teague consequently became more and more dependent on railway freight business and B-RI discontinued passenger service in 1964.

To preserve the railroad history of Teague, volunteers set out to purchase the Teague Depot. The depot was converted into a museum, which is now known as the B-RI Museum. This unique structure was recognized as a Recorded Texas Historic Landmark in 1970 and was listed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1979.

The 1960s, 1970s and 1980s brought other industry to the Teague area. Texas Utilities constructed an electric generating plant northeast of Fairfield. Houston Light and Power, Utility Fuel Inc., Northwestern Resources and NUCOR Steel are located plants around Jewett and employ many Teague residents.

In February of 1989, Teague and Fairfield formed an alliance to convince the Texas Department of Criminal Justice to locate a prison in Freestone County. Construction for the prison unit started in the summer of 1990 and was completed in 1992.

YOU'VE FLOWN THE FLAG. NOW WHAT?

Since September 11th, 2001, we have all witnessed a powerful resurgence of the American spirit. But patriotism alone is not enough. We must protect ourselves and our families by learning how to be safe and calm in the event of a terrorist attack.

First, make an emergency supply kit. Set aside the supplies you'll need to survive three days at home. You'll need clothes, sleeping bags, nonperishable food and a gallon of water per person, per day. Other items will be helpful too – a flashlight, a battery-powered radio, extra batteries, a first-aid kit and toilet articles.

Second, make a family communications plan. Make sure family members know how to contact each other in an emergency. It may be smart to have everyone call an out-of-state friend or relative. Keep a list of emergency numbers near the phone. Plan how you will evacuate if you are asked to do so.

Third, be informed. In emergencies, planning pays off. If your family knows what to expect, all of you will be calmer in the aftermath of a terrorist event. For details on emergency preparedness, visit our website at www.ready.gov. Or get a free brochure by calling 1-800-BE-READY (1-800-237-3239).
