TORNADO

SURVIVAL TIPS

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN A TORNADO HITS

The straight pressure of the tornadic Wind against windows and walls is the single most destructive force. A maxi tornado or F5 can cause winds of 318 mph! It can level all small buildings in its path and even damage steel reinforced buildings. Motor vehicles are the worst place to be during a tornado because they are tossed like toys, generally killing occupants.

Flying tornado debris is the second most dangerous factor. Rocks, pencils, pieces of glass, bricks and even larger objects such as cars and busses can become airborne, killing and injuring all in their path. A high rate of head injuries occur because of these flying objects, so keep down and protect your head.

Debris from the collapse of portions of buildings is the third most dominate factor. It can crush people who have escaped the wind blast of debris.

The fourth factor is the explosive force created by the instantaneous drop in outside air pressure when the tornado's center passes directly over a tightly closed building. Opening windows a small amount is helpful.

TORNADO DOs DON'Ts

DO

- DO try to get to an underground shelter, well ahead of time
- DO get as low as possible
- DO Keep away from all windows
- DO get into or near the sturdiest and smallest part of your house
- If outside, DO head for a ditch, culvert or ravine
- Even in a basement, DO take as much additional coverage as you can.
- DO leave the vicinity of south and west walls and avoid hallways with direct west or south openings as these can become wind tunnels
- DO evacuate mobile homes well ahead of time!

DON'T

- DON'T get or stay in your car, bus or truck, the results are like a 60-80 mph head-on collision.
- DON'T expect underpasses to provide adequate shelter, you could be sucked out
- DON'T look out windows just as the noise is loudest
- DON'T run to another building just as a tornado hits. It's too late then and you're better off staying low
- If the storm line is known to have tornados and is moving toward you, DON'T wait until the last minute to leave a car, building or mobile home!
